Dear Subscribers,

Welcome to our second issue of the Engaging Aging e-newsletter!

Please note: If for some reason a link does not work, copy and paste the address into your browser. Also, a reminder, if you are interested in posting and/or receiving jobs in aging announcements, please read the details at the end of this newsletter.

As always, thank you to all who donate to us! Your support is essential for continuation of our e-newsletter and new Jobs in Aging Board.

Important: If you have content for the February newsletter, please email it to me at jisrael@berkeley.edu by February 18, 2011.

Best to all and enjoy!

• New Jobs in Aging Board
As noted in our December issue, we’re very excited to be able to offer this informational service to our subscribers! Our goal is to strike a balance between timely job posts, and delivering information in a thoughtful way (e.g., doing our part to reduce email traffic to your personal inboxes). Note: it is important that you remain a subscriber to our jobs in aging listserv to receive key updates regarding the Jobs Board. Please remember that your donations will help sustain this informational service. Here is the link to our user-friendly Jobs Board: http://jobsinaging.easyjobboards.com Remember, we are asking that you now post your own positions—instructions are at the end of the newsletter. (Jobs will remain on the board for approximately one month unless you request an extension.) IF you wish to receive daily updates on job postings, please scroll to the end of the jobs board page and sign up! You will notice an option called “get job updates”; to activate this feature, you will need to enter your email address. To date, there are approximately 35 agencies that have one or more positions available. If you need assistance during this transition, email Desi Owens at: desiowens@berkeley.edu.

• New Website: Desi Owens launched the Center’s new website. Please visit: http://socrates.berkeley.edu/~aging/index.html
While still in progress, we update content regularly.

• New On-Line Donation Option to support Center activities: http://socrates.berkeley.edu/~aging/support.html

Long-term Care and Health Care Reform
by Dorothy P. Rice
Professor Emerita, UCSF

The Patent Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA) of 2010 includes reforms of all aspects of our health care system, but little attention has been focused on the changes related to long-term care of older and disabled persons. This article focuses on the long-term care provisions of this historic Act.

One of the important provisions is the Community Living Assistance Services and Supports (CLASS) program that establishes a national voluntary insurance program for long-term care services and supports. This program establishes a completely new public-private approach to financing and accessing long-term care services. Premiums will be collected through payroll deductions. Individuals whose employers agree to participate in premium withholding will automatically be enrolled. Other methods for making premium payments will be established for those employed by non-participating employers. Premium amounts will be set by the Secretary of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. To qualify for benefits, individuals must pay premiums for five years and meet the functional and/or cognitive criteria established by the Secretary. The program is effective as of January 1, 2011, but the Secretary of HHS must develop details of the plan no later than Oct. 1, 2012. So it is likely that people will be able to sign up after that date.

The plan will pay a cash benefit of no less than $50 per day, that will be pegged to an assessment of a person’s need for help with basic activities such as bathing, eating, dressing, and mobility. There are no lifetime limits on the benefits.

The PPACA also contains provisions that could expand Medicaid community-based long-term services and supports by establishing new optional benefits including:

- Increases in Federal financial participation for State expenditures on Medicaid Home and Community Based waivers, Pace programs, and home and personal assistance to adopt structural changes in their long-term services and support systems.
- A new State Plan Option for Attendant Services and Supports that expands the definition of attendant services to include one month’s rent, utility deposits, and household furnishings to help persons to transition from institutional to community living.
- Spousal impoverishment- Mandates the application of spousal impoverishment protection to persons whose spouses qualify for home and community based services.
- Long term services and supports workforce is strengthened.
- Background checks are required for employees providing services to persons receiving long-term community-based or institutional care.
- Expands Aging and Disability Resource Centers to serve long-term services and supports.
A Fulbright Experience
by Pam Arnsberger, PhD, Professor, University of Hawaii

Coming from the University of Hawaii to Queens University, Belfast (QUB) was more than just a change of weather. The Changing Ageing Partnership at QUB provided me with a new model for interaction between researchers, service providers and older consumers. The project, established by Atlantic Philanthropies to improve the quality of life for older people in Northern Ireland (NI), funded over 20 research projects at QUB. These included studies on older people caring for adult sons and daughters with developmental disabilities, age discrimination, nutritional habits of older adults, community action for health, physical activity programs especially tailored for older men and even social dance for the elderly. I found that there are both similarities and differences in the way aging research is conducted and aging services are offered in the UK and in the US.

First, Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic are developing an innovative model for participation of their older population in the community-based research process. Research launches and meetings involved the senior community resulting in spirited exchanges, with valid points and issues being raised by older adults. I believe researchers learned as much from the audience at those sessions as did the audiences from the researchers... a true exchange. In the UK there is also more emphasis on trying out interventions and less on experimental research methodology than in the states. This leads to more community level experiments, rather than the small treatment and control group studies we have in the US.

The National Health Service, through the health and social care trusts, have a strong commitment to provide long term care options and far more available sheltered housing opportunities than in the U.S. However inexpensive interventions to increase health-related quality of life in these settings (such as ongoing recreational and therapeutic activity programs) are limited. Institutional care, while it does not impoverish elders as it does at home, seems to be of the same quality as the US. Furthermore, it does not include some of the protections that are available in the US (e.g. required reporting of elder abuse and a system in place to process those complaints).

Finally, my own research project, on comparing self-assessed health status of caregivers across the US, China and the UK, showed caregivers in the UK are doing better than in either China or the US (in spite of lower incomes). It appeared that NI caregivers were benefitting from caregiver support policies that have been enacted in the past 10 years such as direct payments to carers, carer allowances, increased availability of respite services, women’s pensions at an earlier age and new designs for sheltered living arrangements for elders and people with Alzheimer’s Disease, all exciting ideas for future exploration in the US.

Aging-Friendly Communities and the Village Model
by Andrew Scharlach, PhD, Professor, UCB School of Social Welfare

Aging-friendly communities are a central focus of work at the Center for the Advanced Study of Aging Services, a research center housed in the School of Social Welfare at UC Berkeley. The Center’s current projects include research on the characteristics of physical and social environments that support healthy aging, effective community change strategies, and examples of model community-based initiatives. For example, the Center recently produced a Compendium of Community Aging Initiatives, a comprehensive report that for the first time documents in a single place the various efforts across the country to help communities become more “aging friendly.”

http://socialwelfare.berkeley.edu/NewsEvents/compendium_aging.shtml

Research on the “Village” model. A major line of research examines the development, implementation, effectiveness, and sustainability of the “Village” model of senior support services. Villages are consumer-driven, senior membership organizations that have the stated goals of allowing members to remain living in their own homes and apartments, be actively engaged in their communities, and meet their health care support needs as they grow older. In return for annual dues, members of these “Villages” receive a variety of services and support (e.g., transportation, grocery shopping, referrals to home care and other discounted services, care coordination, volunteer opportunities, social and cultural events) specifically designed to help them age in place and avoid institutionalization. The model was pioneered in 2001 by Beacon Hill Village in Boston, Massachusetts, and now has been disseminated in at least 50 communities nationwide, with hundreds of other communities considering developing new Villages.

The Center’s research program includes a comprehensive quantitative and qualitative evaluation of these 50 villages, including their organizational characteristics, funding, membership recruitment, service provision models, service outcomes, and sustainability. To date, we have conducted two initial surveys of existing Villages across the country, examining the characteristics of seniors served by these innovative organizations and various organizational characteristics. We also are working with the SCAN Foundation and ElderHelp of San Diego, to examine the cost-effectiveness of their Concierge Club Village model. Future plans include a multi-year study of Villages nationally in order to evaluate the extent to which the Village model actually achieves its stated goals (age in place, active engagement, support needs met), and to test a conceptual model regarding the factors that contribute to program effectiveness.

California Senior Legislature
by Shirley Krohn, Senior Assembly Member, California Senior Legislature
Representing Contra Costa County, http://www.4csl.org/

At the end of the annual California Senior Legislature (CSL) Session in Sacramento, attendees selected the top ten State legislative proposals. Aging issues covered included increasing fines associated with ID theft, increasing the homeowner's property tax exemption from $7K to $27K for seniors, increasing mileage allowance for senior volunteers, identifying the purpose of a prescribed medication on the label, property tax deferral for seniors, and making sure disabled seniors are accommodated by emergency response teams in the event of a disaster.

One of my proposals was voted number one. This has to do with repealing the 2013 sunset clause in the Financial Elder Abuse Reporting Act of 2005. This is about financial institutions being mandated reporters of suspected financial abuse. I'm happy to report that this particular proposal has been picked up by Senator Joe Simitian.
Another of my proposals was voted number seven and is very controversial. It would establish an independent long-term care ombudsman program here in California. It currently resides under the Department of Aging, which is out of compliance with the Federal Older Americans Act which prohibits the program from being housed in the same department as state licensing. We are currently looking for a legislative sponsor for this important legislation. This proposal was a collaborative effort. It was the basis for an intergenerational project wherein a grad student from CSU Bakersfield, supervised by a faculty member, worked with me and a group of stakeholders from throughout the state to research and craft the proposal language. This intergenerational approach to policy creation continues on other legislative projects that will be introduced in 2011.

Jobs in Aging Board Information

Note: it is important that you remain a subscriber to our jobs in aging electronic mailing list to receive key updates regarding the Jobs Board.

Here is the link to our user-friendly Jobs Board: http://jobsinaging.easyjobboards.com

Remember, we are requesting that you now post your own positions. Jobs will remain on the board for approximately one month unless you request an extension. If you wish to receive daily updates on job postings, please scroll to the end of the jobs board page and sign up! You will notice an option called “get job updates”; to activate this feature, enter your email address.

How to Post

The following details should significantly lessen the learning curve!

To submit a new job post:

Click on the green plus sign with “submit a job” on the right side of the homepage.

There are several fields to complete, such as “job title” & “location.”

Under the “contract type” options, if none apply, select “other.” The “hours” field is optional.

At a minimum, please include the following in the “description” box:

- Job Description
- Name and address of company where job is located, and url and/or background information about your organization
- Contact person including name, phone number and/or email address

IMPORTANT: to mitigate formatting problems in the “description” box, copy and paste your job summary from a Word document or Text Edit to the “description” box without text enhancements (e.g., bulleted, bolding, etc.). If desired, do wait to bold, underline, and/or italicize content until you have already entered all information in the box; icons are available should you wish to do this.

If you do not have information for an “optional” field, leave it blank.

Next, type in the requested words in the security box and click on the “post” button. Your post will be sent to the jobs administrator for review; if complete, it will be approved and posted as soon as possible. If we need additional information or have questions, we will contact you.

Also, remember to enter your name and email address in the appropriate text boxes below the “description” box so that we can contact you if needed.

If you need assistance during this transition phase, please contact Desi Owens at: desiwens@berkeley.edu

Donations
The newsletter and jobs lists are complimentary services of the UC Berkeley Resource Center on Aging. Please consider making a donation to support this work. Suggested amounts:
$10-$15.00 a year for newsletter
$10 a year for job listings
$20 a year for both
$20 per job posting
$10 per newsletter posting
We appreciate all donations, large or small. Our monthly e-newsletter and jobs in aging posts will continue through our fiscal year, June 2011; there will be no newsletter or job posts in July and August 2011. We will resume both services in Fall 2011 (contingent upon funding). Thank you!
